ANNUAL REPORT

“The absolute best thing about Pinky Swear and why we love it above all other non-profits, is that they were there right away. The support was immediate – Pinky Swear was almost stealth-like; there was no waiting until our child’s journey was near the end or over. They were there to give us support we didn’t even know we needed.”

- All-Star Haakyn’s mom, Tory

All-Star Haakyn and his family

Dear Pinky Swear Foundation Supporters and Friends,

As we reflect on 2024, we are in awe of the incredible generosity of our Pinky Swear community. You made an extraordinary impact on the lives of families facing childhood cancer as they navigated an unimaginable journey. We are excited to showcase your impact in this 2024 Annual Report.

You provided critical financial assistance to a record number of families, ensuring they had a roof over their heads, gas in the tank to travel to treatment, and food on the table to stay nourished during difficult times. You lifted a significant burden off parents, ensuring they can focus on what matters most – their child. This financial support is life-changing for families, and you have made it possible.

We look to the future with hope and optimism – and awareness that significant need remains as the demand for direct financial assistance for families continues to increase. The support from our Pinky Swear community is especially important now, and we continue to be so grateful for your care and compassion. Your support allows us to say “yes” to more families.

As you read this report, we hope you will join us in celebrating all that we have accomplished this year, together. Thank you for your support of Pinky Swear and the families we serve.

With gratitude,

Karla

All-Star Mitch

THE ORIGINAL PINKY SWEAR PROMISE

Mitch Chopokas was nine years old when he was diagnosed with terminal bone cancer. When he was in the hospital in December, he overheard the family next to him having a discussion that there would not be enough money for holiday gifts that year.

Mitch looked at his dad, Steve, and said “This isn’t fair. How much money do I have?” Steve helped Mitch into his wheelchair and took him to the bank. Mitch withdrew all the money he had in his savings account and put it in envelopes for the kids on the pediatric oncology floor at the hospital. He signed each envelope “Love Mitch, XOXO.”

Before Mitch passed away, he made his dad pinky swear promise to continue helping other kids with cancer and their families. Now, Mitch’s legacy lives on through Pinky Swear – and our compassionate supporters. Since his death in 2003, Pinky Swear Foundation has helped thousands of families with financial support, allowing them to focus on what is most important during the childhood cancer journey – their child.

ALL-STAR HAAKYN

“We received a notification from Pinky Swear that our mortgage had been paid. And that gave us 30 more days of not having to worry about how we were going to pay that bill.”

– All-Star Haakyn’s mom, Tory

Before Haakyn’s cancer diagnosis, his family described their life to be busy but carefree, full of activity and adventure. His parents, Tory and Ryan, worked full-time, and Haakyn was an active little boy who loved playing sports with his older brothers.

Everything changed on New Year’s Eve, when the then five-year-old began experiencing back pain so severe he couldn’t stand. Ten days and multiple trips to the doctor later, they received the devastating answer to his pain: Wilms Tumor, Stage 3.

Within 48 hours Haakyn was rushed to emergency surgery because his tumor had ruptured. His cancer journey would go on to include nine rounds of radiation and 24 rounds of chemotherapy.

Ryan stopped working. His job required him to be away for 20 days each month, and they were concerned about him missing an important moment. “There were tough days, busy days at the hospital, sick days, days when we did not know how to make it better. We needed him home so we could all be together” Tory shared. She was able to continue working remotely, but the loss of additional income was hard, especially as they navigated unplanned medical expenses.

As Tory and Ryan reflect on this time, they remember struggling to ask for help – and the relief they experienced when Pinky Swear Foundation stepped in with direct financial support. They received an Orange Envelope to assist with gas and grocery costs, and a mortgage payment through the All-Star Fund. Receiving this support lifted a financial burden they had been carrying since Haakyn’s diagnosis – and reminded them that they weren’t walking this difficult journey alone.

When asked what message they’d wish to pass on to Pinky Swear supporters about the impact of their generosity, Ryan and Tory said “Thank you. It was life-changing for us. We didn’t know we needed help, but we did.”

FOUR-STAR

All-Star Haakyn and his mom, Tory

“In the beginning of a diagnosis, I believe every family goes through denial that they will need help at some point. It’s lost on them because they are in ‘fight mode’ with their child. My husband and I spent many moments contemplating the impact of an organization that shows up; it’s very bittersweet, and it touches you right to the core.”
